

Dear Humans

(side note: The left and right columns of this poem may be read separately or together.)

You have grown so much since the beginning of time,
You have taken me for granted you treated me like I was replaceable
You are using every part of me you are leaving others homeless.
leaving me defenseless, your fortresses could not stand the test of time,
I've helped you, I provided you with shelter
I tried to teach you but you scarred me in response.
But why do you kill animals? Why do you cage others?
Why do you pollute my air? Why are my animals extinct?
Others live on this planet too, they deserve a better you
They'd be better off without you... You have not tried your best,
I appreciate your efforts, but it's not too late to save them.
Please take care of me. Please save what's left.

Yours, Planet Earth

Written by Dawn Alethea Lowe En